

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A steering column has an expanded portion to be in pressure contact with opposed flat plate portions of a vehicle body side bracket. A shaft is inserted through the plate portions and the expanded portion for adjusting the distance between the plate portions. The width of a portion of the steering column along a line crossing the center of the steering column is larger than the width of the expanded portion where the shaft is inserted.